Your operators don’t need another app.

They need fewer.

Connected worker is real

Checklists, handover, skills and work instructions, finally off paper.

But bought standalone...

It doesn't know which order is running. It can't stop a quarantined lot being used.

So you add MES/MOM

Two systems. Two logins. Operators switching screens all shift.

Built in, it knows the context

Checklists appear by order. Quality checks fire when the material changes.

And skills are enforced

The wrong person can't start the wrong job. Handover comes from real data.

Connected worker is the front door.

MOM is the house behind it.
